City Hall in the Morning

Was thronged from an early hour with a patriotic and enthusiastic assembly of ladies and gentlemen, a large number of ladies having accompanied their husbands, brothers and sweethearts. The audience was entertained by speeches and songs, and the enthusiasm was very great.

Col Edward Jay Allen, of this city, read the following original poem, which was received with great applause:

THE VETERAN.

Nay, step aside and give him space
While stained and threadbare suit of blue
And battling gait and limping pace
Tells of the veteran tried and true;
Ashore his thoughts all seaward stare
He gives no way and the crowd,
Half muttering his thoughts aloud,

For the crowded street has gone from his sight,
And the ring of his heel is the sentry's tread,
The gentle old wife, in the cottage home
Have faded away, and in their room
The battle's smoke and shot and clamor
The challenge rings out—Hail! Who goes there?
And the bayonet glances and sparkles near,
With the enemy camped on the hills beyond.

And the wild hurrah he hears again,
And the tattered flag that leads the onward war,
And the cliffs of foreign land are waving rain,
But the trenches are ours; and the lines of grey
Are wiping back as the sun goes down,
O, the patriot fire, and the might of his hand,
As he sticks to the colors and shouts the charge!
And hears the joybells ring through the land!

O, the glory of home—sweet eyes that shine
With the glow of love when the dear name is seen
On the bead roll of honor, and lives, too,
That believed and knew, when the world did dream,
That he would come back home more proud
Or courage more true, though day by day,
His only shield be the stars and stripes,
And calmly plodded along his way.

No grief to day for the shrunken limb;
No sigh for the empty sleeve at his side;
No regret for the path, though it be strown dim
And the light hides out of the battle pride;
Unassuming, amount these he stands,
How gallant hearts went down to the dead,
And he himself was not to quail or pause,
And walks away with a reverent head.

Stretch out long stories, in narrowing line,
Flow numerous tides of many feet,
Loal hammer with a constant chime;
O, river, surge the wheel to greet,
Smile, reapers, with a vivran hope;
And harvest with a certain hand;
The strife is o'er, the battle done;
And gentle peace is in the land.

Oh, Veteran! in whose gleaming eyes
The glory of the past shines,
In coming years a grander prize,
A nation's reverence shall be thine.
And burning words shall tell the world
Thy noble deeds who, 'gainst the wrong,
The right did battle, and never knew
And suffering made the nation strong.

And glistening eyes shall glow with tears
At name, thing, that in days past,
Shall agese ringing down the years—
The heroes of the Revolution.
Like martial music sweet and strong
It was and when we are gone
Borne onward by the tides of song,
And crowned by immortality.

The Ladies' Glee Club.

One of the most noticeable performances of the morning was that of the Ladies' Glee Club, under the direction of our well known citizen and musician, Mr. Charles Mellor. The club, numbering about one hundred ladies and gentlemen belonging to our best families, were placed in the gallery of the hall, and presented a view of the finest sights that has been witnessed in the city. Previous to the organization of the Convention, the club sang, with great power, "Hail Columbia," the solo being performed by four ladies, Mrs. Lippincott, Mrs. McKeown, Miss Jones and Miss Joy, and the audience soon joining in the chorus. Shortly after Prof. W. J. Pope, conducted the house in singing the stirring words, position, called "My Policy," which contained many capital hits. Being vehemently encored the club responded by a short piece, proving in a very humorous but convincing manner that there was considerable difference to be noted between the Secession and the modern one of Tennessee. The Club then sang "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," and received a perfect storm of applause in token of their appreciation. On the opening of the Convention they gave the grand old song, "Old Hundred," in which all the audience joined. It was probably the greatest display of musical talent ladies and gentlemen belonging to our best families, were placed in the gallery of the hall, and presented a view of the finest sights that has been witnessed in the city. Previous to the organization of the Convention, the club sang, with great power, "Hail Columbia," the solo being performed by four ladies, Mrs. Lippincott, Mrs. McKeown, Miss Jones and Miss Joy, and the audience soon joining in the chorus. THE CONVENTION AND REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES.

A party in politics without principles is like a man in business without capital. The coalition party is in a still worse condition than such a man, since it has neither capital nor credit. The two principal ingredients in the Philadelphia formation—the late secessionists and their Northern sympathisers and allies—had a bad record to begin with. The small element drawn from the Republican party, that was expected to sugar-coat the mixture and make it go down with the people, was too thin for the purpose, and soon drew bitterness enough from the rest to require coating itself, which it has failed to get, and so the whole nauseous compound is rejected.

The fatal want of sound and loyal principles in the coalition is demonstrated by the individuality of its origin and connections, and by the hostile attitude which it took, from the start, towards the accredited representatives of the people, constitutionally organized as the Congress of the United States. "My policy" is the slight pivot on which the whole thing rests, and on which it swings round the circle with an unfortunate and dangerous facility.

On the contrary, the policy of Congress, the proper authority to originate it, embodies the great general principles of the Declaration of Independence, and the doctrine of just popular representation, without discrimination in favor of or against any State of the Union; and with reference to the present work of restoring the States that attempted to break up the Union, the policy of Congress proposes that they shall come into their functional and proper place, that they shall come in at the right door, as friends and equals, with no concealed weapons and no outside criminal accomplices, foreign or dom estic.

In other words, the principles of the Republican party on this point are embodied in the Constitutional Amendment. On this the coalition takes antagonistic ground, so that the real issue is on this line. The people have with promptitude and enthusiasm approved this ground, because they believe it to be right, and that it is the best of all reasons. In the work of reconstruction, the voice of the people evidently demands all that is required in the proposed amendment. They will be satisfied with this, and with nothing less than this, and they ask nothing more. On this ground, a plain and open field, the present election contest is conducted, and we have no doubt a glorious Union victory will be won.

In the interest of these grand, central and momentous principles, involving the safe, honorable, just and permanent restoration of the Union, the Pittsburgh Convention is assembled. For these the Republican party pledged themselves, and they are believed to be right. These should be steadily and singly maintained by the action and utterances of the Convention, as they are in the convictions and consciences of the loyal Republican people. The opposing party cannot stand before them. It is already staggering under the mere announcement of these just and liberal principles of reconstruction. It has attempted to start false issues and side issues, to evade the true ground and to escape a fair fight, which it knows must end in utter defeat.

It has watched closely, and is watching still, as its forlorn hope, for some deviation on our part from this strong and just ground. Its alarmed, yet desperate leaders are keenly eyeing our serried ranks to discover some weakness or diversion in our lines. But the intelligent people, the Republican party, and a press unawed by menaces and unseduced by Executive patronage, have steadily kept to the true and exclusive ground of the contest as set forth by Congress, and to this are due the enthusiasm which animates the great body of the people, and the demoralization that already has invaded the ranks of the coalition, from the President downward.

Let the Convention hold firmly to this point, and hold it up in their actions and speech, clearly, and without veil or distracting concomitant, and it is sure of victory over all ambitious and deceptive policies. Embody it in resolutions, proclaim it in addresses, inscribe it on banners, and it will lead us not only to victory, but such a triumphant victory as will secure the restoration of the Union on just and durable foundations, and establish peace, order and prosperity over our whole country.

CHEATED AND DISGUSTED.

The Democrats who went into the fusion arrangement with the so called Conservative Republicans, are becoming intensely disgusted at the way they have been cheated, and the manner the thing is coming out. The recent indications of a deliberate intention, on the part of the aforesaid Conservatives, to back out and go in for the Constitutional Amendment, has brought things to an interesting pass, for it has shown the Democrats that, having gone out to gather wool, they have themselves been badly shorn. They now find that, notwithstanding the concessions they have made, the humiliation they have been subjected to, they are to be deserted by the President's friends who are abandoning his policy, to which the Democrats hastily, and, as they now perceive, unwisely committed themselves, and taking grounds for the Republican plan of restoration as agreed upon by Congress. As Democrats they must either follow and virtually disband, or keep on for "My Policy," after the author of it and his friends have given it up.

And then, too, the Democrats begin to perceive that the offices are not given out to them anything like as fast as they expected; that even now the idea of fighting it out within the Union party, is talked about by the special supporters of the President and dispensers of his patronage. The aforesaid conservatives have no idea of becoming Democrats, and they do not hesitate to say so. On the contrary, since the Maine election, they have made haste to make known that they are Republicans still, and to-day we have the New York Times declaring that, after all, there is no material disagreement among Republicans, and that the Constitutional Amendment is the true doctrine.

Now, under circumstances like these, if Democrats were not disgusted and "boiling over" under a sense of the outrageous fraud that has been perpetrated on them, it would be strange indeed. As the case stands, the most they can do is to take the back track too, and do what they can to preserve their own identity, which has been measurably lost in the alliance. Success for them, at the ensuing election, is totally out of the question, and the only question of real interest to them is, how they can save the pieces!

BRING UP THE SUPPLY TRAIN.

Our "Boys in Blue" were occasionally hard up for hard tack when pursuing the enemy and separated from the supply trains. Let it not be so here in the hospitable city of Pittsburgh. The grand army is with us in the peaceful gains of citizens—as grand and mighty as when armed and uniformed for the field of war. Let free hospitality be the word, and the word be interpreted by the deed. Bring up the supply trains. Luxuries are not wanted. Roast beef will do, without the plum-pudding, and "soft bread," or "hard tack," as suits the convenience of the fair commissaries and quartermistresses, who have ever been true to the soldiers and the cause.

The muster is large beyond calculation. The more need for general hospitality. Put on the camp-kettle and the frying-pan in time for dinner! Shake out the blankets for the soldiers' beds, and report at once to the Committee!

THE N. Y. TIMES AND THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENTMENT.

The Constitutional Amendment is fast vanquishing all opposition. The President even finds himself, concerning it, much as LEE found himself at Appomattox, while GRANT in front was engaging all before him and SHERIDAN, with resistless impetuosity, was hacking and slashing as he only could. The great victory—the final surrender is at hand. Already the white flag has been thrown out. The Herald raised it first. Mr. WEED rushed to Washington to display it to the President. The Premier brought it forth. And now the Times has hoisted it.

In the New York Times is an article in favor of the amendm ent as the only practicable mode of reconstruction. The President's policy is formally abandoned, it is presumed not without a knowledge of the temper of the President himself. In all this may be seen the influence of overwhelming public sentiment, the manipulations of which we see all over the streets to-day, and which is everywhere displaying itself to the dismay of the opposition.

The editorial article in the Times to which we have referred, is as follows:

"There is not the slightest difference of opinion, so far as we are aware, in the Union Party, and very little anywhere else, as to the wisdom of ratifying the Constitutional Amendment proposed by Congress. It received every Union vote in the House, and is sustained by every Union journal throughout the country. The only point upon which differences do prevail is as to the policy of making its adoption a condition precedent to the admission of representatives from Southern States. Upon this, Union members of Congress were not agreed among themselves. Some were opposed to admitting them until after the amendment should have become part of the fundamental law, by the ratification of three-fourths of all the States. Others, like Mr. Bingham, of Ohio, insisted that whenever any Southern State should ratify the amendment that State should thereupon be admitted to representation. Others, like Mr. Bontwell, of Massachusetts, and Mr. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, refused to pledge Congress to admit them even after the amendment should be adopted, and others still did not deem it within the constitutional power of Congress to impose its adoption as a condition of admission to the fundamental right of representation.

"In point of fact, the adoption or rejection of the amendment has nothing whatever to do, as the law now stands, with the admission or rejection of members from the Southern States. A bill providing for their admission on condition of its adoption, was rejected by the House, and even if every Southern State should ratify the amendment to morrow, Congress has not pledged itself in any way thereupon to admit their representatives in Congress. The two questions are entirely separate and distinct, and each must be determined upon its own merits.

"The Times here quotes the amendment entire.

"The objects sought to be attained by this amendment are important and desirable. The first, which clothes with the equal civil rights belonging to citizenship all the native born inhabitants of the United States, commends itself to every man's sense of justice and of public policy. It was the worst feature of slavery that it kept a large class of persons outside the protection of the law; and now that slavery has been swept away, there is no shadow of excuse for perpetuating this worst of all wrongs. We trust the Southern States will make speedy provision for extending the full protection of the law over their enfranchised slaves, in common with all their people; but aside from this there are many reasons of justice and propriety why the National Constitution should make this guarantee universal and perpetual.

"The second clause of the amendment is designed to remedy an inequality which now exists in the enjoyment of political power. It was decided by the framers of the Constitution that population and not voters should constitute the basis of representation, and this ceases to be the wisest rule only when large classes of the population are excluded from suffrage in some sections of the country and not in others. Then it becomes an element of inequality and injustice. A voter in the one section has double the political power of a voter in the other. This inequality exists to-day between the Northern and the Southern States, and it ought to be corrected. This would be true if the question had never had anything whatever to do with the rebellion—or if the inequality were in favor of the North instead of the South, every man can see that it is unjust, and the Southern States ought to see it as well as the Northern. And as no section is to be benefitted in the long run by any inequality or any injustice, the South as well as the North ought to ratify this amendment. It, involves, it is true, a temporary surrender of a portion of the political power now enjoyed under the Constitution; but that surrender would be more than compensated by removing an injustice which, so long as it exists, must be the fruitful source of sectional discontent and national disease.

"The third clause of this amendment declares certain classes of persons who took a responsible part in the rebellion ineligible to office until relieved therefrom by two-thirds of Congress. While the power of Congress to participate in the exercise of the pardoning power, or to prescribe qualifications for local office in the several States, may be open to doubt, none can test upon the substantial justice of this provision, so far as Federal office is concerned. Men who have waged war upon the Government cannot complain of any wrong in being excluded for a time from personally sharing in authority and power. And the time when they may thus be readmitted is within the wise discretion of the Government itself. This is a wholly different question from that of admitting States to representation, as it touches only the question of the character and qual fications of the persons by whom those States may be represented; and in this respect the amendment is not unduly harsh or severe. As it originally passed the House this clause exclud. ed every man who had taken any part in the rebellion, or given it aid and comfort in any way, from voting until after the next Presidential election; but this was changed in the Senate, and as it now stands is not open to serious objection.

"The fourth clause simply forbids the payment of the rebel debt and is not opposed by anybody; and the fifth only gives Congress power to carry the other provisions into effect—a power Congress would probably possess in the absence of any such specific grant.

"The Amendment now awaits the action of the Legislatures of the several States. It is just in itself, and its adoption, by remedying injustice and providing for the public safety, would do much toward tranquilizing public sentiment and preparing the way for the more speedy restoration of peace and harmony to all sections of our common Union. It is greatly to be regretted that all the States were not represented in the Congress by which it was proposed: but it is submitted to them all for their consideration and action. Nothing would conduce more to the public peace than its speedy ratification, especially by those States which are to be most directly affected by its provisions."

HON. GEORGE V. LAWRENCE AND THE TARIFF.

In publishing the names of Members of Congress, some time since, who voted for the Tariff Bill, we unfortunately omitted that of Hon. G. V. LAWRENCE, of the Twenty-fourth District. We have the authority of our member, General MOORHEAD, for saying that Mr. LAWRENCE not only voted for the bill, but earnestly and anxiously aided its passage in every stage; also, that he appeared frequently before the Committee of Ways and Means, especially on the subject of an increased duty upon wool, and made one of the ablest arguments that was presented to the Committee on that subject.

"ARM IN ARM."

The Pittsburgh re-union is no dramatic show, contrived, rehearsed and played off for effect. It is not a farce, got up by a few party leaders of disordered and desperate political factions. We have seen no lock-smiths about, to put padlocks on the lips of free speech. Our people can be trusted with the use of their own tongues, without any fear that they will blab treason, or that there are traitors among them whose delicate sensibilities may be offended by the utterance of loyal truth.

In every respect the Pittsburgh Convention holds a position of bold contrast and proud pre-eminence, above any demonstration made, or possible to be made, by the mottled and conglomerate coalition that begun its existence with an attempted hoax on the country, and is rapidly closing it with the actors in tears and the people in a general roar of good natured laughter. The Pittsburgh Convention is not assembled like the already half forgotten one in Philadelphia, to attend the accouchment of a party but it is the representative of a party that has borne the burden and heat of the day through all the fierce conflict with treason and rebellion, and has brought the country through safe and the Union entire. And its unalterable purpose is to keep both in that condition, by their intelligent suffrages at the coming election.

We have no "pairing off" of true men with traitors, no linking of traitors with traitors, but an honest, hearty union of loyal citizens, joined shoulder to shoulder for the triumph of the old cause.

WHAT IF HE SHOULD?

If NED FORREST, the rebel hero of Fort Pillow, should send a friendly, encouraging letter to this Convention, as he did to that of Cleveland, how many cheers would greet its announcement? What sort of an answer would it receive, if it received any? We imagine a missive, from the bloody hand that murdered prisoners after surrender, would not meet with very great applause in this Convention.

The Western Union Telegraph Company and the Russian Extension.

A good deal of feeling has been caused, in Cincinnati, among the stockholders of the Western Union Telegraph Company, by the recent action of the Board of Directors, looking to the purchase of the Russian Extension Company. That company was organized by the Western Union Company with a capital of $10,000,000, the Western subscribers having the privilege of subscribing pro ratta. The privilege was also reserved by the Union Company to consolidate with the Russian Extension, in two years after the completion of the latter upon the basis of the net earnings of the two companies. The Western Union Company had the option to consolidate, or not.

The stock of the Russian line was all subscribed, and $2,500,000, or twenty-five per cent. paid in. Since the completion of the Atlantic Cable, and the successful fishing up of the old one, where by there are now two cables in successful operation, the Russian extension has been regarded as a failure, even if it should be completed, because, on account of the great length of time it will require to transmit messages it can never compete with the Atlantic Cables.

Regarding it in this light, the Board of Directors of the Western Union Company, without consulting the stockholders of the Western Union Company, passed a resolution to pay back to Russian Extension stockholders the calls and interest, or, in other words, to purchase the Extension Company for $2,500,000 with interest, payable in Western Union bonds at ninety cents on the dollar, thus creating a debt for Western Union stockholders to pay of about $3,000,000.

It is stated that the gentlemen who passed the resolutions are most, if not all, very largely interested in the Russian Extension Stock.

The Union Stockholders are now asking the Directors to rescind the resolution, or if they do not, they threaten an injunction to prevent the Directors from carrying it out.

A Soldiers' and Sailors' Fair.

During the present week a great Fair, to aid in the erection of a monument to the memory of the Soldiers and Sailors of Dauphin county, Pa., will be open at the State Capitol, Harrisburg, under the auspices of Governor Curtin. The Hall have been tastefully adorned by festoons of flags and evergreens, and innumerable articles of value and elegance have been contributed by the fair hands of Union women all over the county. The Fair was informally opened yesterday, in view of the presence of the Republican Union men in such large numbers, and the ladies were most liberally patronized in their patriotic work. A luxurious wrapper, has been put up as an object of contention between the friends of General Geary, the Republican candidate for Gubernatorial honors, and Hiester Clymer, the Democratic candidate; the partisan receiving the largest number of votes will be presented with the wrapper.

Major General George G. Meade has signified his intention to be present, and General Ulysses S. Grant has informed the Committee that he will visit the Fair some time during the week, if he can possibly get away for a brief time from his post of duty.

James Stephens to Return to Ireland.

On Sunday last, the Fenian Brotherhood held a meeting in New York. Fifty-five circles were represented by three hundred and eighty-one officers and delegates. More than twenty of those present had but recently returned from confinement in British dungeons, and they all avowed their unalterable determination to go back to Ireland, to fight for the Irish nationality at the order of their Chief Organizer, James Stephens. There were unmistakable signs of a complete revival visible. The following preamble and resolution was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, James Stephens is bound in honor before the world to return to Ireland this year; and whereas, his advent to Ireland must, we believe, be the signal for battle, be it therefore

Resolved, That any man or party, be they Irish or foreign, who should henceforth endeavor to obstruct, or in any way injure his work, shall for evermore be looked upon as enemies of Ireland; and with the proverbial tenacity of our people, we pledge ourselves to remember, for good or evil, the words and deeds of all such Irishmen or foreigners as aid or oppose us in this momentous struggle, involving not alone the independence of Ireland, but the very existence of our race.

The Firm of Peto and Betts.

The London newspapers have made open charges against Sir Morton Peto's firm, of improper financiering in connection with the affairs of one of the great railroads with which they were contractors. But it appears that the tide has again turned in his favor, for at a late indignation meeting of the stock and debenture holders, which was largely attended, and every thing full of fierceness against him, he unbesitatingly appeared upon the platform, and made such a statement as at once turned the tide in his favor. A correspondent writing says: "Few men, under any circumstances, would have had the moral and physical courage to do what he did, and none at all, I venture to say, unless sustained by the consciousness of his own honesty."

Minister Washburn and the Blockade of the Paraguay River.

Minister Washburn, the American Ambassador to Paraguay and the Argentine Government, has at last been permitted to pass through the blockade of the allied force, who were blockading the Paraguay river. The United States Government, on hearing of the fact that he was denied permission to pass the blockade into Paraguay, immediately and emphatically insisted that he should be allowed to proceed, and that to prevent him would be regarded as a violation of custom, courtesy and national law. The allied power withdrew their opposition, on this notice, and allowed Mr. Washburn to proceed.

CROSBY OPERA HOUSE ART ASSOCIATION.—It has been heretofore announced, that the books of the Association would be closed on September 22d; but the time, thus limited, has been found to be too short to complete an undertaking of such magnitude. The sales have been so large as to insure, beyond doubt, the entire success of the enterprise. If the engravings could have been furnished as fast as they have been required, there is but little doubt but that every certificate would have already been sold. The Committee agree with the Management, that the books should not be closed, while a short extension of time will, at the present rapid rate of sales, suffice to dispose of the remaining certificates. The subscriptions will therefore be continued a short time longer, and the day for the award of premiums will be announced at an early day.

THE Chicago Times has changed its form to the quarto style, put on a new typographical suit, enlarged its size and added other improvements. The Times, while its politics are execrable, is one of the most enterprising journals in the country.

RUSSIA.—A good deal of interest attaches to the movements and intentions of Russia—the former being difficult to understand. There are two reports in circulation; one that she will leave to Prussia the responsibility for her recent enlargement policy, and even that she is to become a friendly ally of this Austro-Prussian combination. The preponderating indications are another character, and, in fact, unfriendly and threatening. The formation of a new Russian Poland is talked of, to which Austria must be forced to contribute Gallicia. And this corresponds to the announcement from Belgium, that General Manteuffel, who had been on a mission to Russia, to make explanations concerning the purposes and recent action of Prussia, and secondly, to desire guarantees of the sanction of European Powers to the great territorial and political alterations in Germany, and finally to advise more German ideas generally, had reported unfavorable of the tone at the Court of St. Petersburg.

THRILLING ACCIDENT IN THE CHICAGO OPERA HOUSE.—Last night, during the performance of the Hanlon troupe, an accident occurred, which might have proved more serious than it did. As the Rolande brothers were performing the feat called the "alliora volante," the younger, after hanging by his leg to the rope, and swinging toward the other, endeavoring, as usual, to spring across the intervening distance of some ten feet, and catch the hands of his brother. He made the leap, but failed to catch his support, and, to the breathless horror of the immense audience, fell to the platform, a distance of probably twenty-five feet. Some men on the stage below succeeded in catching him, and succeeded in breaking his fall, but the performer was considerably bruised, and after making his bow limped away and disappeared for the night. It is thought, however, that he will be able to appear as usual today. The excitement for a time was intense, and the relief was proportionately great when the slight extent of the accident was apparent. —Chicago Tribune, Saturday.

A PROFITABLE BOARDER.—In a prominent hotel in Nashua, N. H., a few weeks since, a young lady engaged board for a few days, and at the end of that time, when about to leave, told the landlord a young gentleman would be along in a day or two and settle for her board. The obliging landlord told her she might leave her valise for security, which she did, and took her departure. About a week afterwards the landlord opened the valise, as no young man appeared, and found that it was stuffed full of sheets and pillow cases that belonged to the rooms in his hotel, and were his own property. The young party had improved her time during her stay, and had "made over" some of the articles into garments for herself.

SPEAKING of the Philadelphia Convention and the expectations based on the alliance there entered to, the New York Commercial pertinently remarks: "Hardly six weeks have now elapsed, and it is apparent to the most casual observer of the times that the whole movement has fallen flat upon the country, giving fresh force to the fable of the mountain and the mouse. Why this sudden and unlooked-for collapse? The explanation is to be found in the fact, that the Philadelphia Convention was a movement of politicians solely and exclusively, a project for building a new man organization, to be known as the "Johnson party."

AN EXPLOSION.—In Cincinnati, on Sunday morning, a tremendous explosion, that could be heard several squares, occurred in a second story chamber of the little old frame building known as "Ben. Fleischauer's boarding house," at the corner of Ninth street and Central avenue. A powder flask, wrapped in rags, and containing a large quantity of powder, had been thrust into a stove by some unknown person, tearing the stove into many pieces, smashing the furniture, the windows, the floor and the ceiling, and burning the clothes on the person of Mrs. Swaine, who was in the room.

GENERAL GRANT.

Letter from General Grant's Father—His Career a very Remarkable One—His Position as Regards the Presidency—Under what Circumstances He Will Accept the Nomination.

[From the St. Louis Republican, September 20.]

MR. EDITOR:—I herewith hand you a letter from my old and highly esteemed friend, and for a term of twelve years my partner in business, Hon. J. R. Grant, father of the illustrious and honest Ulysses Simpson Grant.

I do not suppose the old gentleman thought of having this letter go to press, but thinking the public may feel some interest in reading a letter written by the General's father, I take the liberty, and a chance of getting a rough "rubbing down," of handing you the letter for publication.

If it is not asking too much, and you feel so disposed, you can publish it in your valuable paper, and oblige yours, etc.,

E. A. COLLINS.

Virginia City, Friday, Aug. 17, 1866.

COVINGTON, KY., July 19, 1866.

E. A. Collins, Esq.:

My Kind Old Friend: A few weeks ago I received a long, and, you may well guess, a very welcome letter. That letter I should have answered at the time, but as you had heard at that out-of-the-way part of the world that I had been appointed Postmaster of this city, and that it was near the close of the quarter, and that you know it was quite a task for me, a new hand, to make a report and keep it correct for so large an office, you will say that I have a very good excuse for my delay, and especially so when I tell you that I have only this day got off the last of my report.

You may wonder how one at my age should be appointed to such an office. I will tell you. When Abraham Lincoln was elected to preside over the destinies of this truly great nation, he took one Samuel P. Chase into his Cabinet. He had always been a good Democrat, when abolitionism had nothing to do with party politics. Well, there was a man in Cincinnati by the name of Hamilton Cummings, a very noisy abolitionist, and, of course, he was admirably calculated and fitted for the office. All that was necessary was to rent a house and move his family to Covington. It was done, and he was appointed.

I was well known to Governor Dennison, Postmaster General, and also to the President. About that time I wrote to our Congressman, ironically condemning him for his vote on the Negro Enfranchisement bill for the District of Columbia. He went to the President and told him to appoint me postmaster, and it was done; and as it afforded me a very nice little salary of $3,000, which you know I never had any objection to, I took it, and entered on the duties, and things moved on well.

Well, I have told you now I was made Postmaster. I will now reply to your letter as well as I can from memory, for really your letter has been mislaid, and I can't lay my hands on it. Respecting your success in getting that article that is good for the "sore eyes," I know you don't care any thing about it. Why should you? You have now more than ever will be needed to cure all the sore eyes in your family. You say your are leaping your affairs to get from about October. I will try to go out as soon after your return as possible.

You say something about my Soldier Boy. I forget what, but I believe you say you want to go to Washington when he is inaugurated President, and ask me if I will go with you. Oh, yes, certainly I will go, and hope we may have a nice time of it. Stranger things than that have happened, but not more strange things than that would have been four or five years ago.

You know Ulysses is not and never was an aspirant for any personal favor or promotion. When the war broke out he felt that, as the Government had educated him as a soldier, and as it was likely soon to need his services, he would not withhold them, so he was among the first to volunteer for the war, and from the very least of it his career has been a very remarkable one. You know he never asked for an office, a promotion or a command, but would accept such when consulted.

But he was appointed, promoted, or ordered, he took right hold, and has commanded larger armies, fought more battles, taken more prisoners and more ordnance than any other General history gives any account of. You may have noticed that the Government and the people fully appreciated all he has done, and a good deal more. He was promoted from a private up to Brigadier General in a few months, and all the time placed in important commands. He was promoted until there was no longer any rank to promote him to. Then the Congress created a new rank of Lieutenant-General, and he was again promoted to that rank. Not satisfied with that, Congress has created a still higher rank, of what is called a full General, and yesterday the Senate confirmed his appointment to that rank.

I suppose they will have to be content, as there is no other rank which can be created. But that is not all. The people have avowed in every way; besides the promotions I have described, and the large substantial testimonials he has received, the people are disposed to do him honor. Take that altogether, don't that seem a little strange to you? It does to me.

Now there is another thing which seems equally strange; the most ultra radicals, the worst copperheads, the desperate secesh, and the true Union men, all say: "Give us Grant, we want no other platform than that he has written with his sword."

You know enough about Ulysses to know that to accept the Presidency would be to him a sacrifice of feeling and personal interest. He could not well stand the trial of being a candidate for public favor, but if there should be in every way a much better one than that of President, but if there should seem to be the same necessity for it two years hence as now, I expect he will yield. Yours, &c.,

J. R. GRANT.

Curious Facts.

The St. Louis Dispatch relates the following curious facts: Nearly forty years ago the steamer Neptune sunk in the bend below Cairo, and it was reported that she had a large amount of silver on board. As there were no Western boats or steamers or boats in those days, no effort to save any part of her cargo was made until twenty to twenty-five years afterwards, when a bell boat, after long search, succeeded in finding the wreck, well buried in the sand. A large quantity of lead was recovered, and, among other articles found, was a keg of butter which, for a short time after being opened, was apparently as fresh and sweet as when it left the Ohio river many years before. But, by the time all hands had a mouthful of it, its delicious flavor commenced to show signs of decay, and in a few minutes emitted such a detestable odor that the lovebirders were glad to push it overboard with long poles, while their noses were tightly compressed. Sets of knives and forks, a carpenter's tool chest was also found, the tools in which, when opened, seemed to be in a remarkably fine state of preservation, but the metallic parts and the planes appearing almost entirely eaten away by rust. In a few hours, however, after being exposed to the air, the entire wood work crumbled into dust, and the tools became so thickly coated or eaten up by rust, that it could be broken in pieces by the fingers. It was never known, publicly, whether any of the silver was recovered, but many persons thought that the divers would be more than likely to have secured some of it. If none of the silver was recovered, the owners of the hull boat were nevertheless well paid for their enterprise by the recovery of lead and other articles from the wreck.

The steamer Glendy Burke, which sunk several years ago by striking the rocks which extend down the river from the point at Cairo, had a large quantity of lead on board, and the people of the land known as Bird's Point, saved a large quantity of it at various times during low water, and had it stored in his cellar. At the breaking out of the war of rebellion, a search, made by Federal soldiers, revealing the leaden deposit, of which, indeed, no secret was made and Mr. Bird was forthwith arrested and imprisoned on the charge of having Confederate war material in his possession.

HONORING THE DISHONORED.—On Tuesday last the bodies of ten rebel soldiers, two of whom were shot by order of General Burbridge, some two years ago, in retaliation for the murder of a Union citizen of Scott county, KY., by guerrillas, were reinterred, with great pomp, in the cemetery at Georgetown, Ky. Ex-rebel soldiers, rebel sympathizers, etc., to the number of five or six thousand, formed the funeral cortege. Basil Duke rode at the head of about three hundred mounted men, formerly of Morgan's command, and the widow of the latter occupied a carriage in the procession. All the rebel soldiers, and many others who took part in the demonstration, wore the red, white and red badges.

A CONFIDENCE OPERATOR.

His Failure to Succeed in Detroit and Chicago—His Operations on a Cincinnati Bank—He Comes to Grief—Concerning him and his Scheme.

[From the Detroit Post.]

Some three or four weeks ago a well dressed, rather finely appearing man, about sixty years of age, presented himself at the Russell House in this city, registered his name as Francis C. Burdett, and secured rooms for himself and servant. The most peculiar feature of his appearance was the irregularity of his movements occasioned by the loss of a leg. In its stead he had substituted one of ingeniously contrived Parisian manufacture, which fact was, however, apparent in his gait. He represented that he was an Englisn lord or baron, or nabob, or something of that sort, and that he was troubled with a superfluity of money which he proposed to invest in real estate in this city. He was evidently supplied with sufficient funds for procuring all the convenience and luxuries necessary to one who would sustain the character which he represented himself to possess. He displayed numerous drafts on London and Liverpool firms, and called at several of our banks to ascertain the feasibility of obtaining cash on some of these drafts, but we have not learned that he actually disposed of any.

As it was the avowed object of his visit to Detroit to make investments, he called upon several of our real estate agents and immediately entered into negotiations for the purchase of property. His principal dealing was with W. J. Waterman, real estate agent. He selected some of the most valuable property in the market, including one or two residences on Fort street, offering in payment in each case his drafts on Liverpool. These, of course, were accepted only on condition that they should be forwarded at once and the money obtained upon them. Accordingly, a large amount of this paper, which is now believed to have been utterly worthless, has been forwarded to England. It is hardly necessary to await a return of mail to know what the answer will be. His purchases here amount to an aggregate of nearly $30,000.

But he did not spend all his time in Detroit. He went several times to Owosso, a village on the line of the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad, where he also made considerable investments. He paid frequent visits to Chicago, being often absent several days at a time. His rooms at the hotel were kept for him always while absent, and he was not suffered to get far in arrears on his board bills. Early this week he went to Chicago, and the Chicago Post of Thursday announces his arrest in that city for being a confidence operator of consummate impudence and tolerable success. The Post gives the following account of his operations in Cincinnati and Chicago:

About the middle of July last, a gentlemanly-looking stranger, giving the name of McBurnie and representing himself as an extensive dealer in real estate, entered the First National Bank, of Cincinnati, and deposited a box containing, as he averred, $100,000 in specie. The deposit was accepted by Mr. Griffith, the cashier, and a certificate of deposit for the amount given in return. McBurnie returned the next day and drew out $5,000, and the next for the same amount, and so on until $80,000 had been drawn out, since which nothing has been seen of him by the officers of the bank.

After a week or more had elapsed, and nothing seen or heard of McBurnie, the officers of the bank became uneasy, and, on proceeding to investigate the matter, found, instead of $100,000 in specie, a box filled with lead. The matter was immediately placed in the hands of the police authorities, but not the least clue to the whereabouts of the swindler could be discovered. For a time this matter created considerable excitement and discussion, and detectives in all parts of the country were on the lookout for the individual. But, of late, the affair has almost been forgotten, except by a few individuals. A day or two since the police authorities of this city received information that McBurnie was on his way from Canada to Chicago, and would arrive here at a certain time. A full description of the individual was accordingly given into the hands of certain officers, and a close surveillance kept on all arrivals, but nothing in the way of information was gained in this direction.

Wednesday morning, a swarthy, middle-aged man, with a military port and dignified bearing, notwithstanding the evident loss of one of his legs, and the substitution of a cork one, entered the banking house of Tyler, Ulmann & Co., on Clark street, and questioned the cashier relative to the possibility of cashing a sight draft for $100 upon a London banking firm. The cashier eyed the questioner closely and answered in the affirmative as to its feasibility. In the afternoon he was observed by the cashier of Tyler, Ulmann & Co., going into Henry Greenbaum's bank. His suspicions were aroused, and, thinking that the individual was not plying a legitimate vocation, he informed officer Van Vleet. The officer immediately went to Greenbaum's bank, and dropping in as it were accidentally, took an acute survey of the person. In his facial appearance he detected a striking resemblance to McBurnie, the notorious confidence man who obtained $80,000 from the First National bank of Cincinnati, on July 12th, upon the supposition that he 10 bags of shot he deposited with Griffith, the cashier, contained $100,000 in specie. He immediately took the supposed McBurnie into custody, and conveyed him to the Central Station. During the transit to that place the prisoner questioned the other closely relative to the nature of the charge against him. He was informed that he was for defrauding the Cincinnati bank of $80,000. At this his countenance, hitherto pale with excitement, flushed, and, after a moment's hesitancy, he remarked in broken accents, "$5,000, not $80,000." The officer asked him what he meant by that, but he only shook his head and muttered, "Nothing." He gave his name as Francis C. Burdett, and would acknowledge no other, and repeatedly asserted his innocence, saying that it was a case of mistaken identity, and that time would demonstrate the falsity and absurdity of the accusation.

A number of his trunks are at the Russell house, and on the authority of a telegram from a Chicago chief of police they were examined ascertain if they contained any papers which could implicate him. The trunks, however, contained no papers of importance, being filled with clothing of the most unexceptionable cut and expensive material, of which sufficient were tained to make good the proprietors of the del against any loss they may have sustained this summary cutting short of the career of e gentlemanly swindler.

Burdett is a man apparently about sixty years age, very irregular features, and swarthy mplexion. His hair at one time must have en very black, but is at present tinged with ver threads. His eyes are sharp and piercing, d are surmounted by a massive brow, which dicates a man born to command, and who s, at one period of life, exercised authority in nodegree. He is a particularly gentlemanly ntleman, and his pleasing address has doubtless helped him greatly in his profession. is believed that his attempted game here was entire failure, so far as his realizing anything concerned. He had shrewdly laid his wires, d had he not come to grief so suddenly and, ght possibly have succeeded in raising some ney here.

The Chicago papers of yesterday contain additional particulars concerning Burdett, from which it appears that he confessed the Cincinti swindle, and gives the following particu- concerning himself:

He claimed to be an Englishman by birth, d that he had been engaged for a number of rs in the banking business in London, out ten years ago, as he says, he was suddenly taken with a mania for travel, and embarked on a steamer at Liverpool, which made the ire passage around the world. He had been nearly every country on the habitable globe; l seen everything that was worth seeing exthe inside of a penitentiary, and was glad an opportunity was now accorded him for tification in this last particular. He wanted ss the rest of his days in prison. If the ge should sentence him for only five or ten rs he would beg that it might be made for He was tired of life, of the trials and hardips, and wanted rest—quiet, undisrbed rest,—and the chances now were that his est longings would be gratified. He further ed that he had held the rank of Colonel in nfederate army, and lost his left leg the battle of Chickamauga."

The Ritchings English Opera Troupe
Is now in a most complete state of organization, embracing in its list of artistes some of the finest operatic talent of the English school known in Europe or America. A GRAND CHORUS OF 30 VOICES, AN EXCELLENT ORCHESTRA, and all the requisites for rendering Grand Opera in our Native Tongue, with as great satisfaction to the musical ear as has ever been imparted by the best foreign organizations of modern times.
The Ritchings English Opera Troupe is the first complete organization that has ever attempted the task, in America, of rendering Grand Opera in English, our own familiar tongue, through which we are enabled to combine the pleasure of listening to the gems of the great masters and understanding the creations of the librettist, without the use of the uninteresting libretto.
The success of this excellent troupe during the past week at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, has been most unequivocal. The vast auditorium of that magnificent structure has been crowded by the fashion and wealth of the Quaker City, and every opera that has been given has been received with universal satisfaction.
The Subscription List for the season at the Opera House will commence at 9 o'clock on WEDNESDAY MORNING, the 26th inst., at MELLOR'S Music Store, 81 Wood street. The season will consist of Twelve Nights, and the

EXTRA TRIBUNE
FOR THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN.
A political struggle, rarely surpassed in importance or intensity, has been precipitated on the country by the treachery of Andrew Johnson and some of his official or personal adherents to the great and patriotic party by which they were intrusted in power.
The aim of this treachery is to put the steadfast loyalists of the South under the feet of the "whipped but not subdued" Rebels, and to enable the latter to glut their vengeance on the former, whom they hate and curse as being responsible for the unexpected overthrow of their darling "Confederacy."
The recent wholesale massacres at Memphis and New Orleans were but conspicuous manifestations of the spirit now rampant in the South, wherever the pro-Rebel triumph in Kentucky is a more recent example. The soldiers of Lee, Beauregard, Johnson and Hood are now the dominant power from the Potomac to the Rio Grande; they each come to office in preference even to stay-at-home Rebels; they have supplanted nearly all others as policemen of Southern cities; they are organized and officered as State militia; and they ruthlessly crush every demonstration of loyal Whites or loyal Blacks in assertion of the EQUAL RIGHTS of AMERICAN FREEMEN. The school houses of the Blacks are burned and their White teachers subjected to violence and outrage by unchanged rebels, who relieve the work of murder and arson by cheers for Andy Johnson, and execrations of Congress.
The purpose of forcing representatives of the Rebel States into Congress, in defiance of the loyal oath, by Presidential fiat and military power, is openly avowed, with threats that those who resist it shall be treated as rebels, and a civil war thus kindled throughout the North and West.
It has thus become imperative that those who stand for LIBERTY and LOYALTY—for the right of the UNION to exist and of MAN to be FREE—should organize and work to strengthen the hands of CONGRESS for the inevitable contest before us.
We must convince the SOUTH and the COPPERHEADS that revolutions go not backward—that Emancipation is an unchangeable fact—that the glorious CIVIL RIGHTS ACT can never be repealed—that the rights of the humblest AMERICAN are henceforth guaranteed and shielded by the FEDERAL CONSTITUTION, and must be maintained against all gainsayers—that the days wherein BLACKS had no rights which WHITES were bound to respect have passed away forever.
We hold to-day the power in the FREE STATES of 1860, in WEST VIRGINIA, and in MISSOURI beside. We must hold these in our unswerving allegiance, and add to them MARYLAND and DELAWARE—the former lost to us through treachery, otherwise Johnsonism. We must elect to the XLth Congress an overwhelming majority devoted to Loyalty, Nationality and the inalienable Rights of Man.
To this end, let Light and Truth be systematically diffused to every neighborhood, every fireside throughout our broad country.
To this end, we propose an extra issue of THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE (precisely similar in size and contents with the regular edition), which we will supply on the following terms, the paper to be sent and subscriptions to commence on the receipt of the money:

The Undine Boat Club's display formed an interesting feature in the procession. They had rigged their mammoth barge, "Albatross," upon a truck, hauled by four horses. In the barge were seated twelve members of the club, wearing their uniform, white pants, blue shirts and tarpaulins. Fireworks were discharged by the members on the route, and their demonstration came in for a large amount of applause.
